

ACCIDENT MARS "CHAPMAN DAY"

J. Walker Hit on Head by Batted Ball on Anniversary of Tragedy

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 17.—J. Walker, first baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, was in a hospital here tonight suffering from concussion of the brain as a result of being struck on the head by a batted ball during the game today between Cleveland and the Athletics.

The accident happened in the first inning. Jameson hit a fast grounder down the first base line and the ball took a false bound and hit Walker on the head, knocking him out.

Thousands of fans who saw the accident and came to the park to commemorate the death of Ray Chapman, who was killed a year ago today when he was hit by a pitched ball, thrown by Carl Mays.

Walker was hit out of the game at least in days, according to Dr. H. M. Castle, the club physician, who is attending the injured player at the hospital.

Doctor Castle reported late tonight that the injury Walker received was concussion of the brain and that an X-ray showed no evidence of fracture. The ball struck him on the right side of the head, about an inch above the ear. It rendered him unconscious for a minute and semi-conscious for a full hour. He was still unconscious tonight and said that he does not remember being struck by the ball.

Looking 'Em Over WITH "BRIDGE"

LET'S SEE WASH AGAIN!

Playing fans who saw K. C. Palmer and Tommy Alva go through twice around the bases today and then saw the Wash-Alva affair Tuesday night, will find a very interesting Wash-Alva match here as soon as the game can be arranged.

The demand for this bout is not confined to those who saw both Palmer and Wash in action against Alva. Many who saw only the Wash-Alva affair also would like to see the closer and at the same time knock-outing, South-West, pitted against a classical opponent than Alva.

Unquestionably Wash made a great impression on all who witnessed his victory over Alva. Wash caused the admiration of all who saw him and he will undoubtedly sell in a great drawing card here next time he steps into a Tulsa ring.

Sometimes it is necessary for a boxing manager to create the demand for a certain bout, then fill it, not like the political bosses create a demand for a particular candidate and then fill it out. This time, however, there is an honest demand on the part of the public to see a match of Wash and the second time, for a serious engagement the better.

GAMENESS.

While the bout-purses are being passed about, however, we must not forget Tommy Alva's exhibition of gameness against an opponent who completely outclassed him in speed and skill.

Tommy struck through a real heavy round and took a fearful beating. Many a fighter would have quit with a lot less cause.

Alva was beaten badly but his career was not hurt at all. He is young, both in years and in experience. He has two of the most necessary qualities of a fighter—a strong right arm and a quick left.

It looks like Chuck Higgins, Alva's manager, is pushing Tommy up ahead too fast. He undoubtedly has been overmatched in his last two bouts, those with Palmer and Wash. Let him breeze along for another six months or so with boys a little below the Palmer-Wash-Alva class until he has a little more experience and he'll be hard for any of them to handle.

PENNANT RACES.

This is a great year for baseball from the office standpoint though ballplayers are hard to find at all.

Of course one reason for the game's wonderful drawing power this season is the natural reaction of public after the war period.

But another and probably more important reason—though it doesn't apply to Tulsa at all—is the closeness of the pennant races in many leagues. Look at the American league where Cleveland and New York are swapping first place two or three times a week. In the National Pittsburgh has managed to stay a few games ahead of the Giants most of the time, but the McGraws are ever right up there ready to jump in the van if the Pirates falter, and the formidable Boston Braves continue sticking around within shooting distance.

Good races are not confined to the majors, either. The American association has some exciting races such as a close and exciting flag hunt as this year, with Louisville, Minneapolis, Kansas City and Milwaukee fighting with almost equal chances.

Right here in our own Western league we have a much better than usual race. The Oilers, of course, are distanced; but Wichita, Omaha and Oklahoma City are having a great battle for the pennant and four other clubs are contesting for the other first division berth. The Oilers ought to have a lot of fun watching pennant races the rest of the season, even if they can accomplish nothing more.

HINGEY TRIES A COMEBACK.

Johnny "Kid" Hingey, who used to cut quite a figure in Tulsa as a boxer and who lived here for many years, is the latest to attempt a ring comeback. Reports have it that Johnny is to meet Jack Slimmer, a Denver lightweight, in a 10-round bout at Hutchinson, Kan., Thursday night. Hingey has been out of the game for some years and probably is not in the best of condition, but for old times' sake we wish him well.

TALKS ABOUT YOUNG MEN

Judge Joseph A. Gill Points Out
Three Classes, at Secretary Club.

The young men of Tulsa are divided into three classes—those of good training who are engaged in mental labor, those of some training who follow manual labor and those who follow nothing in particular, Judge Joseph A. Gill told members of the Secretary club in a talk before that organization Wednesday at its regular weekly luncheon. The first two classes the judge placed side by side in importance to the community, but some of the last class, he asserted, are trouble makers who expect the others to maintain their standards and "shoot like devils" when one of them falls.

The major part of responsibility rests with the first class in the maintenance of the nation's ideals, the judge said. Reviewing briefly the development of the territory west of the Mississippi, in which he had a part, the faithful solution of the many problems that confronted our fathers that does not in any way decrease the complexity of today's problems, the speaker pointed out, in stressing the opportunity and responsibility that are young men's today.

M. Maurice Griffin and Miss E. Allen, accompanied by Miss Allen, sang a duet preceding the address.
